Dr. Brady's Health Talks A Twenty-four-Hour Rest.

The rapidity with which he completed the change of tires proved him an excellent chauffeur, an adept at his craft but he delay was one disastrous for all that. It worked together with what Alan pardonably described as the devile own lucat to bring the touring car in sight at the precise moment when the chauffeur was cranking up and Alan on the point of re-entering the cab. And though they were off again before Alan could close the door, the attempt was hopeless from the start.

And yet—whether or not because Alan's distate for interference had been too convincingly demonstrated—the touring car for the time being contented itself with trailing about fifty feet in the rear, while the tax fled the tenement purlicus of the Hoboken waterfront and found its way into the broader streets of an unprentious suburban quarter.

Not until they were well into this last, with few dwellings near and no medestrians to interfere, did Marrophat's purpose become apparent. Then, however—and it happened while Alan was looking back—the touring car drew in swiftly and easily and Marrophat, rising in his seal, leveled a revolver over the windshield and fired.

The crack of his weapon was practically conincident with a metallic thud beneath the rear seat of the taxicah and neither was repeated. With a satisfied leer Marrophat settled back and pocketed his revolver, while the fouring car maintained its distance, no longer gaining, but showing no indication of an intention to crop back.
